PRESS RELEASE

SOFT POWER

MARCH 16 – AUGUST 11, 2024

This spring, DAS MINSK Kunsthaus in Potsdam will present the group exhibition Soft Power, which positions the art and design of textiles as a means of expression that can question power relations. The exhibition understands textiles not only as handcrafted or industrially-fabricated objects but also as a part of systems. This includes the webs of production and trade that continue to move textiles and people across the globe; the histories, cartographies, and cosmologies that unfold around them; and their use as an integral part of our daily routines and special rituals. The exhibition unfolds in three chapters.

The chapter "Invisible Hands" focuses on the production conditions of textiles and their raw materials, including the history of the Leipzig-Lindenau cotton mill and VEB Vowetex in Plauen, among other examples. The works in the chapter "Disrupting Patterns" refuse to adhere to formal tropes in a demonstration of how textile art can challenge social norms and mechanisms of power by breaking through seemingly infinite reiterations of a fixed order. The chapter "Ancestral Threads" looks at how textiles are used to commemorate those who have come before us, be it direct ancestors or those whose stories and ways of living touch upon our own realities. Just as individual threads can combine to form fabrics and larger networks, the historical and contemporary works in this chapter refer to past traditions that continue to have an effect today.

Soft Power shows works by Magdalena Abakanowicz, Caroline Achaintre, Wilder Alison, El Anatsui, Leonor Antunes, Ouassila Arras, Rufina Bazlova, Kevin Beasley, Mariana Chkonia, Edith Dekyndt, Claus Dobberke, Toni Ebel, Gee's Bend Quiltmakers (Ella Mae Irby, Candis Mosely Pettway, Qunnie Pettway), Philipp Gufler, William Kentridge, Maria Lai, Joanna Louca, Manuel Mathieu, Rosemary Mayer, Elrid Metzkes, Małgorzata Mirga-Tas, Sandra Mujinga, Gulnur Mukazhanova, Otobong Nkanga, Willem de Rooij, Ramona Schacht, Gabriele Stötzer, Sung Tieu, Rosemarie Trockel, Johanna Unzueta, Hamid Zénati, and others.

A further selection of archive material and textile works documents the history of the Zirkel für künstlerische Textilgestaltung Potsdam (the Potsdam Circle for Textile Design) and its position within the state-sponsored program of free-time activity during the GDR, known as "künstlerisches Volksschaffen."

The exhibition is curated by Daniel Milnes, who has worked as a curator at DAS MINSK since June 2023.

EXHIBITION TEXT

The exhibition Soft Power celebrates the ability of textiles to store and communicate a multiplicity of histories and to act as a disruptive force against dominant social and cultural narratives. Specifically, the exhibition looks at how textiles, fiber art, and soft sculpture have the power to move people, things, stories, and ideas in and out of visibility. The exhibition does not focus solely on textiles as crafted objects but understands them as being a part of systems. This includes the webs of production and trade that continue to move textiles and people across the globe; the histories, cartographies, and cosmologies that unfold around them; and also their use as an integral part of our daily routines and special rituals.

While tradition and heritage play a significant role in understanding the different roles textiles play in our lives, the exhibition Soft Power demonstrates how they can also be radically disobedient and unsettle established patterns and categories. Textiles pick at the seams of supposed opposites, such as art and life, and dismantle the hierarchical gap between fine arts and craft, offering more open and inclusive ways of seeing and engaging with the world. The fragility of the medium and the maintenance and repair it demands act as a reminder for how the threads that connect us can be severed and restitched into new configurations at any moment—of our own initiative but also through external forces. The works in the exhibition reflect the complexity of our times and are committed to a self-determined and life-affirming ethos of connectedness in a world defined by divisive political rhetoric.

While most of the artists in the exhibition engage with fiber-based materials and textiles as a central part of their work, a strict adherence to a single medium was not a criterion for selection. Instead, Soft Power adopts the irreverence toward categorization inherent to an art form that has perpetually found itself at the ever-fraying margins of (Western) cultural canons and embraces an expanded approach. The range of works in the exhibition stretches from traditional textile techniques such as felting, weaving, patchwork, quilting, embroidery, and needlework, through to other media including drawing, video, performance, painting, and photography, to show how textiles are entangled in art practices beyond their material presence.

Soft Power is divided into three intertwined chapters. The works in the chapter "Invisible Hands" look at the history of raw materials, textile production, and trade from the perspective of contemporary artists who ask questions about often unseen labor. Particular attention is given to the history of cotton, a material which like no other has defined the fates of individuals worldwide over the course of centuries. A selection of works offers space for reflection on cotton's entanglement in the transatlantic slave trade and looks at how the paradigm set by this triangle of enslavement and trade between Europe, Africa, and the Americas continues to leave its mark in the form of enduring asymmetrical relationships between the Global North and the Global South, and in neocolonial practices of resource extraction that damage the Earth and our environment. In the works, history itself becomes a raw material for the artists, who use textiles and textile structures to think through notions of repair, reinvention and the building of new worlds from their own individual perspectives. Alongside these international perspectives, two works look at the history of textile production in the GDR, focusing on the labor conditions of women workers at the VEB Baumwollspinnerei Leipzig and of Vietnamese contract workers in the East German textile industry, in this case at the VEB Vowetex in Plauen.

DAS MINSK

The second chapter "Ancestral Threads" demonstrates how threads possess a metaphorical power that has run through cultures across the world since time immemorial. They represent both singularity and interconnectedness, continuity, and finitude, and thus seem perfectly attuned to represent the complexity of human existence. The image of the thread can highlight not only the known and unknown networks in which we find ourselves in the present, but can also extend across time and trace lineages from generation to generation. The works in this chapter look at how textiles are used to commemorate those who have come before us, be it direct ancestors or those whose stories and ways of living touch upon our own realities. Particular attention is paid to histories that remain underacknowledged by official historical and cultural canons, such as the stories of queer and Roma communities, as well as those of overlooked historical women figures. Additionally, the chapter pays homage to artists of a generation passed who made a significant contribution to how textiles and fibers are seen and used in art today.

The works in the third chapter "Disrupting Patterns" demonstrate how the graphic elements of textile design can be harnessed to challenge social norms. In their infinite repetition, patterns can stand for continuity, lineage, and tradition, and have the ability project effusive joy through colours and shapes. Yet, patterns can also be seen as cool and systematic visualizations of conformity, as repetitive and stubborn iterations of an existing order that has no regard for those who fall outside its framework. The works in this chapter rupture existing patterns and call for new orders. While some artists encode personal stories and identities into new and exciting patterns, others show how a literal disrupting of patterns can act as a metaphor for moments of political change that affect whole societies.

In the cabinet space, a presentation is dedicated to the history of the Zirkel für künstlerische Textilgestaltung Potsdam (the Potsdam Circle for Textile Design) and its position within the state-sponsored program of free-time activity during the GDR, known as "künstlerisches Volksschaffen". The films, books, photographs, and objects on display offer an insight into the broad range of activities of the group and its leader

KUNSTHAUS IN POTSDAM

Ingeborg Bohne-Fiegert, including the collective production of textile pieces and fashion collections, exhibitions and research trips abroad in socialist states, and the publication of books on the history and practical application of textiles. The two textile wall hangings on display were both produced for the 1,000-year anniversary of the city of Potsdam but within two different political systems, in 1988 and 1993 respectively. These appliqué works represent two of the last projects realized by the group in its original form under Ingeborg Bohne-Fiegert.

INTERPLAY NO. 5

PETER HERRMANN AND ANDREAS GURSKY

The INTERPLAY NO. 5 in DAS MINSK's cabinet brings together the painting Landschaft mit Kühen (Landscape with Cows) (1979) by Peter Herrmann (b. 1937 in Großschönau) from the Hasso Plattner Collection and the large-format photograph Greeley (2002) by Andreas Gursky (b. 1955 in Leipzig) from the Viehof Collection.

Here, an idyllic landscape in the German Democratic Republic (GDR) with three cows, there mass cattle farming in the United States. The depicted scenes are not only geographically separated by thousands of kilometers, but they were also created over twenty years apart. Different artistic means are also employed: one is a painting while the other is a digitally processed photograph. Both artists deal with agriculture, but from very different perspectives.

"I'm a romantic person," the artist Peter Herrmann says of himself. His landscape depicts three cows in a hilly meadow with trees. A Plattenbau towers in the background, roughly implied by a simple black brush stroke. At that time, farmers, animals, and their meadows had to make way for concrete living spaces, Herrmann explained during a studio visit in Berlin-Spandau. Romanticism and modern GDR architecture clash in the exaggerated juxtaposition of the free and seemingly happy cows with the solid, cold concrete building, whose height remains undefined. The artist remembers the reality of the GDR that had inspired him while creating Landschaft mit Kühen: "Before there was this romantic notion of farms with cows in front of them. Then, quite brutally, such 'huts', i.e., new buildings, were erected in the countryside. Not exactly like here in the painting, but it was quite strange. Of course, these were also brutal ruptures in the landscape, but little thought was given to them."

The cows in Peter Herrmann's painting will soon have to make way for living space. From the 1960s, farmers in the GDR had to join LPG cooperatives (Landwirtschaftliche Produktionsgenossenschaft—agricultural production cooperative), which had initially been founded in 1952 as a voluntary association. From 1960, however, a forced collectivization took place—sometimes using drastic methods. Many farmers refused to join the LPG and to give up their property. Peter Herrmann remembers: "In the GDR, the farmers were almost like industrial workers. Some of them brought their farms into the LPG, so the property was then transferred to the LPG and they then became, in the truest sense of the word, farm workers, employed by the LPG, perhaps having as much land as they needed for a garden and two shifts a day. It was a form of alienation."

Andreas Gursky's photograph Greeley also shows livestock farming. However, the image depicts masses of cattle in Greeley, Colorado, captured from a bird's-eye view, sharp with detail that extends far into the distance. His method of digital montage does not detract from the documentary character of his works. On the contrary, Gursky achieves a convincing representation of reality down to the smallest detail. Only by superimposing different shots can he achieve the depth of field over the entire surface.

DAS MINSK

The landscape is crisscrossed by a grid of individual rectangular plots where the cattle are kept. The photograph makes the intervention of the human hand in the earth and the dimensions of mass farming and production visible and nearly palpable in its size and detail. The way in which the plots of land appear to continue on three sides—with the horizon in the background—suggests infinity. The romantic notion of the vast landscape is broken through a sea of animals, who have their last stop in Greeley, Colorado, on the way to the slaughterhouse in Chicago.

This INTERPLAY illustrates how destinies depend on the distribution of land and the use of natural resources: Nature, humans, and animals repeatedly bend to the will and arbitrariness of political systems. It is about power and economy, about the yield and utilization of natural resources and living beings, ultimately leading to exploitation. This is equally noticeable in both the communist and capitalist systems: whether it is the "prestige object" pig high-rise near Maasdorf in Saxony-Anhalt, which remained in operation until 2018, or the former high-rise chicken house in Neukölln, the open cattle sheds in the GDR, or today's pig skyscrapers in China.

There is a great deal of tension between Peter Herrmann's Landschaft mit Kühen and Andreas Gursky's Greeley, but in their interaction both artists reveal themselves to be incisive observers of landscape as a social phenomenon in which humans, nature, animals, and economic interests collide.

What should be done in the face of all the constraints and various interests at play here? Peter Herrmann's recourse to a German saying at the end of our conversation in his studio seems apt here: "You stand in front of it like a cow in front of a new gate!"

DAS MINSK

KUNSTHAUS IN POTSDAM

DANIEL MILNES grew up in Leeds, UK and studied modern languages (German and Russian) in Oxford and art history in Freiburg and St. Petersburg. After a traineeship at the Kunstmuseum Stuttgart, Milnes was part of the curatorial team at Haus der Kunst in Munich where he collaborated, among others, on the globally aligned exhibition project curated by Okwui Enwezor, Katy Siegel, and Ulrich Wilmes entitled Post-war: Art Between the Pacific and the Atlantic, 1945–1965 and co-curated the exhibition Blind Faith: Between the Visceral and the Cognitive in Contemporary Art. He subsequently moved to the Hamburger Bahnhof where he was curatorially responsible for the Preis der Nationalgalerie and co-curated the presentation of the Christian Friedrich Flick Collection under the title Scratching the Surface. At Hamburger Bahnhof, Milnes also worked on solo exhibitions with Katharina Grosse, Polina Kanis, Sandra Mujinga, Agnieszka Polska, Theodoulos Polyviou, Raphael Sbrzesny, Kiki Smith, and Jack Whitten. In 2019, he was part of the curatorial collective that organized the 12th Kaunas Biennale under the title After Leaving | Before Arriving.

AUDIOSTORIES

The AUDIOSTORIES accompany DAS MINSK's exhibitions in unusual ways. Unlike a classical audio guide, they are not based on descriptions of artworks, but instead offer different perspectives on the exhibition's themes and the works on view, including contributions from the artists themselves about their works.

DAS MINSK's AUDIOSTORIES can also be accessed on the museum's website, so you can listen to them anywhere at any time—whether directly in the exhibition or from the comfort of your home.

Tour through the current exhibition

Public Guided Tour in German

Every Thursday and Friday at 11 am, Saturday at 12 pm and Sunday at 2 pm

Cost: 5 € plus admission

The public tour guides visitors through the current exhibitions. In addition to offering background information about the exhibited works and artists, the tour also offers glimpses into the history of the exhibition house and information about the artistic interventions and artworks that are installed in and around the building. In dialogue with the art, and also with each other, the tour allows us to look forwards, backwards, and to the side.

Tour on the history of DAS MINSK in German

Every Saturday at 2 pm

Every Sunday at 3 pm

Cost: 5 € plus admission

This tour deals with the history of the building. Built in the 1970s in the modernist style of the GDR, the former terrace restaurant is a place laden with different memories. After its closure in 2000, vacancy and decline followed until 2018 when a debate about the fate of the building flared up again, ultimately leading to its reopening as an exhibition space.

The tour offers insight into the creation of the restaurant, the time of the vacancy, the transformation into an exhibition space, and the interior design, as well as interventions and artworks in and around the building.

Guided tour for school classes

On request (besucherservice@dasminsk.de)

What is an exhibition space? Who works here? How does an exhibition work? The exhibition space is explored in a tour together with an art mediator. In the second part, the history of DAS MINSK and the current exhibition will be discussed in detail.

COLLECTION AND FOUNDATION

DAS MINSK

KUNSTHAUS IN POTSDAM

"We're showing works from the collection at DAS MINSK that were created after 1945 and deal with the GDR. I've always been interested in the diversity of the art from the former GDR. It's remarkable how many of the painters in particular have dealt with modernism and the Old Masters in their own unique way. The fact that this art is still only rarely seen in museums is a great pity. Showing these works their due appreciation at DAS MINSK can be understood as a recognition of the life achievements of the GDR citizens in general."

– Hasso Plattner

Art from the Hasso Plattner Collection at DAS MINSK Kunsthaus in Potsdam

The former terrace restaurant "Minsk", built in the 1970s in the modernist style of the GDR, has become a place of encounter between modern and contemporary art—and between people. Artworks from the former GDR, which are part of the Hasso Plattner Collection, will be shown here in new contexts.

"For many Potsdamers, the building is associated with happy memories. The architecture from the time of the GDR is part of the city's history and I want to give the place back to the people of Potsdam."

—Hasso Plattner

One focus of the Hasso Plattner Collection is art from the former GDR, and DAS MINSK Kunsthaus in Potsdam maintains the works from the collection that were created after 1945. Developed over the course of years, the extensive collection of significant works by renowned artists from the former GDR, such as Wolfgang Mattheuer, Bernhard Heisig, and Ruth Wolf-Rehfeldt, forms the starting point for the museum's program. Works from this time will be brought into dialogue with contemporary art at DAS MINSK.

"In the new exhibition space, works from after 1945 in the collection will find a home. Art from the former GDR is still scarcely represented in museums today and does not receive the appreciation it deserves. We want to change that by making the works available to the public and showing how diverse and significant the art of this time is."

Commitment to Art, Science, and Nature Conservation

As cofounder and long-time chairman of the software company SAP, Hasso Plattner is one of Germany's most distinguished entrepreneurs. The city of Potsdam now has him to thank for founding two museums and the Hasso Plattner Institute. He was honored with honorary citizenship of Potsdam in 2017 for his great commitment to the city as his second home.

The long-term philanthropic activities of the Plattner family have been consolidated into the Hasso Plattner Foundation since 2015. The internationally active Potsdam-based foundation has set itself the goal, among other things, of accelerating the establishment of digital technologies in science and education, improving access to art and culture, and combining environment and social commitment.

As sponsor and shareholder of both cultural venues DAS MINSK Kunsthaus in Potsdam and Museum Barberini, the Hasso Plattner Foundation finances museum operations, the exhibition program, and the expansion of the collection.

"The former terrace restaurant Minsk is connected with memories for many Potsdamers. Many of them fought for the preservation of the old Minsk precisely for this reason, because to a certain extent it was also about the preservation of their own identity and that of the city. DAS MINSK wants to pick up exactly where it left off and once again establish itself as a place of encounter that extends beyond art. Here we show, search, discuss, endure, and bring together, and hopefully also dance and laugh together again. I hope for being together and for each other."

— Stefanie Plattner
